ON THE COVER: The main lobby of Abbott Northwestern Hospital

“Abbott Northwestern is my hospital.”

This is a statement I hear often in my role as chairwoman of the Abbott Northwestern Hospital Foundation. It is this sense of ownership — this sense of pride — that shows the confidence and trust our community has in our hospital, Abbott Northwestern Hospital.

As we prepared this annual report to donors, it struck me how committed our donors are to ensuring that the best health care in the world is available at Abbott Northwestern Hospital, right here in the heart of our community. Each donation makes a positive difference. Contributions help shape the depth and breadth of care, innovation and excellence that Abbott Northwestern delivers to each of us. A world-class city needs world-class health care, and we are fortunate to have Abbott Northwestern as our hospital of choice.

It is an honor and privilege to serve in a volunteer role at Abbott Northwestern. A special thanks to Jeffrey D. Peterson, our hospital president, and Richard Meyer, president of the Foundation, and their professional, dedicated teams who guide and support our philanthropic work. Thanks to our Board of Directors for their thoughtful oversight and philanthropic leadership. I would also like to recognize and thank our passionate doctors, nurses, other health care professionals and volunteers for their commitment to Abbott Northwestern.

On behalf of the Abbott Northwestern Hospital Foundation, thank you, donors and visionaries from throughout the community, for making Abbott Northwestern your hospital.

EXPERT CARE

Supporting nursing excellence and education in 2009

Ask anyone who has been hospitalized or has cared about someone hospitalized at Abbott Northwestern, and you will likely hear a common theme: the difference excellent nursing care makes.

At Abbott Northwestern, nursing has always been at the forefront of the hospital's excellence. The Nursing Department includes more than 2,000 nurses who serve as the integrators of patient care, ensuring best practices and positive patient outcomes. More than 380 nurses have served the organization for 25 years or more — evidence of Abbott Northwestern's commitment to the profession and the unique environment it has cultivated for nursing practice.

What does it take to create an optimal environment for nursing practice? According to Terry Graner, vice president, Patient Care Services, the key is creating a professional, collaborative environment that supports continuous learning. "Our goal is to have nurses work in an environment that is patient- and family-centered," said Graner. "Each day, we strive to create the type of environment where RNs at the bedside influence care decisions that are made."

An established collaborative governance structure ensures that nurses have a strong voice in improving patient care and monitoring nursing practice, Graner said. "Collaborative governance centers around the ability of the RNs to influence decision-making. It starts at the individual units and extends across the entire hospital."

Celebrating nurses in 2009

The Abbott Northwestern Hospital Foundation has been a long-time supporter of continuing education for nurses and, in 2009, dedicated funds raised at its annual Gala to support nursing excellence. The co-chairs for the October benefit, Holly Denis and Linda Goldenberg, are both strong advocates for the nursing profession. "Patient care at Abbott Northwestern is truly a team effort, and the more professional, stable and well-trained that team is, the better it is for the patient," said Denis. "A huge piece of that team is the nursing staff."

"Personally, I know the quality of nursing care at Abbott Northwestern to be wonderful," said Goldenberg. "We are very fortunate to have this type of care available in Minneapolis. If we don't have excellent nurses, then we don't have a hospital that serves our community well."

Graner said, "The Foundation has been incredibly supportive of the Nursing Department. This support helps us improve nursing practice at Abbott Northwestern and raise the standards for the profession as a whole."

Abbott Northwestern joins elite group of hospitals in achieving magnet status

In February 2009, the American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC) awarded Magnet Recognition Program® status to Abbott Northwestern—the highest level of recognition awarded to fewer than five percent of all U.S. hospitals.

“Abbott Northwestern’s success and reputation for exceptional patient care is based largely on the excellence of our nurses,” said Jeffrey D. Peterson, president of Abbott Northwestern. “They are an essential part of our care team and are most deserving of this recognition. Magnet designation is outside verification of all the reasons we are so proud of our Nursing Department.”

The Magnet status recognizes health care organizations that demonstrate excellence in nursing practice and adherence to national standards for the organization and delivery of nursing services. According to the ANCC, Magnet hospitals consistently deliver better patient outcomes, including more time nurses spend at the patient’s bedside, shorter lengths of patient stay, lower patient mortality rates, higher patient satisfaction rates, and higher nurse retention, recruitment and job satisfaction rates.

Breakthrough radiation therapy technology funded through philanthropy

A new form of radiation therapy using breakthrough technology is now available at Abbott Northwestern’s Virginia Piper Cancer Institute™.

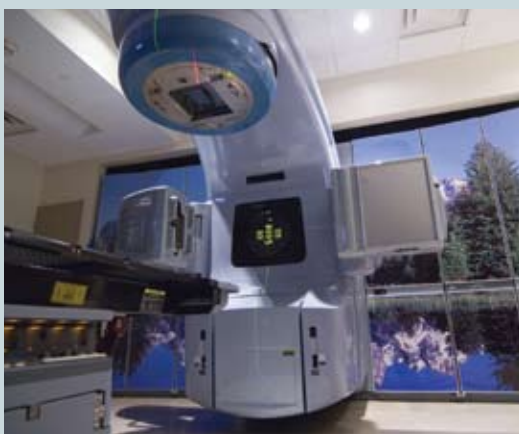

The Trilogy® Linear Accelerator with RapidArc™ is up to eight times faster than conventional forms of radiotherapy, making it more comfortable for patients and allowing them to spend much less time in the clinic for daily treatments.

“RapidArc radiotherapy treatment delivers a tumor-targeting beam with unprecedented speed and precision,” said Katie Schwarzkopf, manager, Virginia Piper Cancer Institute’s Radiation Oncology Department. “This therapy differs from existing techniques because it delivers doses to the whole tumor in a single arc rotation, minimizing the patient’s time on the treatment table. The treatment ensures high precision, which helps spare the patient’s normal, healthy tissue.”

Abbott Northwestern is one of only 15 sites nationwide and 70 sites worldwide to offer this technology.

The purchase of the Trilogy® Linear Accelerator was made possible by a $3.9 million grant from the Abbott Northwestern Hospital Foundation in 2009. Funds for the grant came from the Virginia Piper Cancer Institute’s Vision Campaign, which raised $37.4 million from more than 12,000 donors in support of collaborative, compassionate cancer diagnosis, treatment and care.

INNOVATION

A holistic approach to treating depression and anxiety

In the fall of 2007, 38-year-old Rachel* made a life-changing decision. A wife, mother of two and successful business owner in Minneapolis, Rachel had read The Chemistry of Joy by holistic psychiatrist Henry Emmons, MD. She was impressed by his approach to treating depression, stress and anxiety by blending the best of Western science and Eastern philosophy.

“Since childhood, I had struggled with mood issues, and they worsened with the hormonal changes brought on by having children. I was feeling very sad and overwhelmed,” she explained. “I had a good life, yet I couldn’t enjoy it.”

When she discovered that Emmons was starting a Resilience Training program at Abbott Northwestern’s Penny George Institute for Health and Healing, she immediately signed up for an initial consultation with him and then enrolled in the program. Today, Rachel describes the program as instrumental in helping her to better manage her depression. “When you’re anxious or depressed, it’s difficult to know where to turn,” she explained. “With the help of this program, I learned to accept what was and wasn’t within my control. I draw on the tools that I learned in the Resilience Training each day.”

Participants in the Resilience Training program go to group sessions with 12 to 16 participants who meet once a week for eight weeks. They also go to individual sessions with a clinical nutritionist and an exercise physiologist, and they continue to work with their own physicians throughout the program.

Positive results

The George Institute’s research shows that participants in the program improve in all measured areas including mood, anxiety, sleep and pain—even when these symptoms had been chronic for patients prior to completing the program.

Through a grant from the California-based Mental Insight Foundation, the

Henry Emmons, MD

George Institute was able to conduct initial clinical research on the program and begin work on a Resilience Training facilitator’s manual to train more health care professionals to conduct the program.

Lori Knutson, RN, BSN, HNC, executive director of the Penny George Institute for Health and Healing, said, “We are so grateful for support to expand Resilience Training. Our goal is to make this program available to as many people who suffer from depression and anxiety as possible.”

The Resilience Training Program is offered through the Penny George Institute for Health and Healing, which was founded in 2003 and has become a national leader in integrative health focused on the mind, body and spirit.

Reinventing primary care

Through a grant from the Robina Foundation, the Medicine Clinic is developing an innovative approach to primary care.

When you first enter the Medicine Clinic at 28th Street and Chicago Avenue in Minneapolis, the only visible signs that the clinic has developed one of the nation's most innovative approaches to primary care are three private cubicles located in the lobby. These work spaces house three new staff members funded through a multi-million dollar grant from the Robina Foundation.

These professionals are care guides who help more than 330 of the clinic's patients who have diabetes, hypertension or heart failure. The Medicine Clinic, also known as Abbott Northwestern Hospital General Medicine Associates, offers primary care to adults, especially those with chronic medical conditions. The clinic is staffed by Abbott Northwestern Hospital Foundation's 2010 Gala, "The Medicine Ball — Heart of the City," will be held Oct. 30 to benefit the Medicine Clinic. Call 612-863-4612 to learn more about the event.

Care Guide Allison Shipley with patient Bob Bourke

internal medicine residents and physicians who care for a diverse population of patients regardless of their ability to pay or speak English.

Before the Robina Care Guide Project was launched, 34 percent of Medicine Clinic patients were not meeting the clinical goals developed by their primary care physicians. Nine months after the project commenced, that figure was reduced to 22 percent, according to research done in partnership with the University of Minnesota School of Public Health.

The care guides do not have clinical backgrounds. Rather, their focus is on helping patients manage their chronic diseases through one-on-one counseling, support in navigating the care system, and assistance and encouragement with appropriate self-care. The goal is to help patients make good decisions about their care and lifestyles, enabling them to better manage their health.

Richard Adair, MD, has practiced internal medicine at Abbott Northwestern for 35 years and serves as the principal study investigator for the Robina Care Guide Project. The chronic conditions treated through the project are common, deadly if not managed properly, and have effective treatments available for them, Adair said. "Nationally, the statistics are not pretty. Fewer than half of American patients with diabetes, hypertension or heart failure achieve their goals."

"This is part of a national movement to support primary care, and it has been great for our patients and the morale of our physicians," added Adair. "We're hoping that this project will encourage more medical students to select primary care as their career choice. Our success is a team effort and is putting Abbott Northwestern and Allina at the forefront of reinventing how patient-centered medicine is practiced."

COMPASSION

The Park House program Helping clients live well with HIV/AIDS

Michael Jennings was living in a nursing home with HIV/AIDS when one of his caregivers recommended he try Abbott Northwestern's Park House program.

Two years later, Jennings credits Park House's services and staff with enabling him to leave the nursing home — something he thought would be impossible. Park House's exercise therapy helped him regain strength.

Michael Jennings

Support groups provided comfort, friendship and a sense of hope for a better life. Education on life skills and cognitive therapy helped him think for himself and improve his short-term memory, which had been damaged by his disease.

"I really feel that Park House has granted me a wonderful opportunity to accept my HIV and live with it," Jennings said.

Founded in 1996, Park House is one of only a few programs in the United States providing day health services for people living with HIV/AIDS. The program serves the Minneapolis area and offers clients nursing care, psychosocial support, nutrition services, creative and complementary therapies, and collaborative treatment planning with physicians and case managers. The Park House staff includes a PhD psychologist, therapeutic recreation specialist, mental health therapist, pharmacist, chaplain, nurses and volunteers.

In 2009, Park House moved from the Crosby Mansion on Park Avenue down the street to the Phillips Eye Institute Medical Office Building. The move was done to help eliminate the expensive and challenging maintenance and utility needs that come with an older building.

Clients like the new location, which offers the anonymity of being in a building with other services, said James Maurer, Park House manager. The new space is easy to access, comfortably furnished and warmly decorated.

Park House services are made possible by the generosity of donors. "Philanthropic support is what will keep Park House going to support the ever changing needs of persons living with HIV/AIDS," Maurer said.

Park House has adapted over the years to the needs of its clients, who in 1996 faced an end-of-life disease, but today face a chronic illness that they may live with for many years.

"Park House empowers our clients with a renewed self-image and ability to take part in the community in which they live and will continue to live," Maurer said. "Our clients have learned that life is not over for them."

New program provides a caring presence to hospital patients dying alone

At some point in their careers, most nurses will have the poignant challenge and privilege of caring for a patient who is at the end of life.

One group of nurses recognized that this situation is made more complex if the patient is dying alone. “It tears a nurse apart to leave a patient dying alone in their hospital room,” said Laura Sandquist, RN, council presence for patients who are dying alone in the hospital.

“I received 70 emails within the first three days of asking for volunteers,” said Sandquist. Only registered nurses were asked to volunteer in the pilot program. “Nurses already have the training and screening necessary for direct patient contact. This was the most logical approach because it is

—No One Dies Alone volunteer chairwoman of a Medical/Surgical unit at Abbott Northwestern.

With the support of a grant from the Abbott Northwestern Hospital Foundation, Sandquist and a small group of colleagues launched the No One Dies Alone program (NODA). The initiative enlists compassionate volunteers to offer a quiet, calm the most efficient use of our time and resources.”

The pilot ran six months, starting in September 2009. Since then, a team of 30 volunteers and two phone coordinators are continuing the work as a permanent hospital program.

Because the program is volunteer driven and requires few supplies, it will require little in the way of overhead costs long-term, Sandquist said.

“Our first and foremost goal is to do the best and right thing for these patients,” said Sandquist. “It also helps us offer assurance for families who may not be able to be with their loved ones during their final, vulnerable moments. And, NODA is a resource for the nurses who are caring for these patients, but cannot be with them at all times. It gives them comfort knowing that someone will be there.”

Abbott Northwestern enhances its service to military men and women

In 2009, Abbott Northwestern Hospital opened the Liberty Club — a private waiting area with a welcoming environment and personalized services for military personnel, veterans, and their family and friends.

JoEllen Evavold, RN, of Abbott Northwestern and the Minnesota Air National Guard, presents a photograph to hospital President Jeffrey D. Peterson for the Liberty Club in October 2009.

“This is a way for our hospital to show its gratitude to the men and women who have served our country,” said Desiree Abele, supervisor of Volunteer and Guest Services.

The club features:

- a recognition wall honoring service men and women
- a 50-inch, flat-screen TV with Blu-Ray donated by Best Buy
- a guest computer and telephone
- a large picture window overlooking the Abbott Northwestern mall.

Volunteers generously give their time to serve as hosts in the club.

The Liberty Club was born out of Project Hero, a demonstration initiative with Humana Veterans Health Care Services, Abbott Northwestern Hospital and the Veterans Administration Hospitals in Minnesota.

GIVING

Leonard and Merle Dobbs

Showing gratitude by leaving a legacy

Merle Stromberg Dobbs was born in 1921 and grew up on a dairy farm in Buffalo, Minn. In 1957, she married Leonard Dobbs after they met at the insurance company where they spent their entire careers. As newlyweds, they lived in south Minneapolis. Later, they moved to Edina.

Both Merle and Leonard, who passed away in 2009 and 2005 respectively, were cared for at Abbott Northwestern in the 1980s — Merle for breast cancer and Leonard for cardiac valve replacement surgery through the Minneapolis Heart Institute®.

“They lived private lives,” said Scott Vergin, Merle’s nephew, who helped care for Merle after Leonard’s death. Vergin, who works as a portfolio manager at Thrivent Financial for Lutherans, was asked by Merle to help handle her estate upon her death.

“My aunt was very health conscious and kept meticulous records of her medical care,” explained Vergin. “She and her husband were treated very well and successfully at Abbott Northwestern, and this had a big impact on her.”

Of his aunt’s planned legacy gift to Abbott Northwestern, Vergin feels that his aunt wanted to give to an institution where she could make an impact—and recognize the difference that it made in her life. “The most important lesson in my aunt’s gift is that one should always be respectful and give good service, and you never know when it will be repaid back to you,” explained Vergin. “Both she and my uncle received excellent care from the people at Abbott Northwestern over their lives. They had good health outcomes, lived long lives and wanted to give back to a place where they knew good work was being done.”

Investing in a passion for integrative health

A passion for a more holistic approach to health led Doug Baker, Sr., and Carole Baker to make a planned gift to Abbott Northwestern's Penny George Institute for Health and Healing.

Doug and Carole have been interested in integrative medicine for decades. As a teenager, Doug sought out integrative therapies for his health care needs. Carole has practiced Iyengar Yoga for 30 years and is also certified as an instructor. Throughout her life, she has applied the concepts of holistic health, many of which she learned in her study of yoga, to herself and her family including the importance of a healthy diet and meditation.

"At various times in our lives, we've needed and sought out more and different types of care," said Doug. "There are many ways to care for health issues that are less invasive and require fewer pharmaceuticals than what our culture has often called traditional medicine."

Their affiliation with Abbott Northwestern is personal. As a patient, Doug has benefitted from the inpatient services provided by the George Institute.

"This gift is a natural fit for us," explained Doug. "We're really excited about the leadership at the hospital, and Allina deserves huge credit for moving Abbott Northwestern in this direction."

Two breast cancer survivors inspired to help others

When Shirley Billigmeier was diagnosed with breast cancer in July 2009, she found comfort in action. She immediately went into research mode, discussing options with her surgeon and oncologist, determining her best course of treatment and purchasing a wig for what seemed an inevitable part of her fight against cancer — the loss of hair during chemotherapy.

As she was preparing to start chemotherapy, she learned about another option to hair loss — cold cap therapy. Widely used by cancer patients in Europe, the cold cap option is relatively unknown and rarely used in the United States.

Cold caps are precisely cooled to a subzero temperature, then placed on the patient's scalp at specific intervals during chemotherapy. Studies have shown that the majority of users can save their hair or greatly reduce the amount lost as a result of chemotherapy.

"As I learned more about this option from people across the country, I decided that I would try the technology," explained Billigmeier.

When Shirley and her friend, Nancy Marshall, also a breast cancer survivor, examined the cap plan, they realized that a major barrier was the lack of a biomedical freezer at Abbott Northwestern that could keep the caps at the required temperature.

Marshall organized a fundraising drive for the freezer, and through the generosity of friends who donated funds to the Abbott Northwestern Hospital Foundation, a freezer had arrived by the time Billigmeier underwent the second of six chemotherapy treatments. She went through the chemotherapy process and by the end of her treatments, she still had her hair—something that amazed her chemotherapy nurses and oncologist.

"I wasn't going to let hair loss interfere with my health," said Billigmeier. "But the instant I knew I had an option, it absolutely helped me tolerate the effects of my chemotherapy. When you are able to keep your hair, you can focus on other parts of your healing."

Memorial and Tribute Gifts

A memorial creates a lasting remembrance of a loved one and that person's special significance to the donor. Tribute gifts are often used to honor or show appreciation for a person or special event. Memorial and tribute gifts support many critical programs at Abbott Northwestern.
